There are many ways to save animals. We humans need to save animals that are in need of help. Some animals need things that we humans can do. Animals need a good environment to live in and protection from humans. There also is another thing they need us to do – to show others why we need them and how important they are.

Animals need a good environment because whatever affects the environment affects the animal living there. To prevent a bad environment, you can ask your teacher or principal if you can create a club for saving animals. After school, the club can go to an animal shelter near school and help take care of the animals. Or, if the principal or teacher says that you can't form a club, you can go to a park and clean there so it can help your community and the animals that live there. You can show people how it hurts their environment when you're cleaning up their mess.

Animals need protection also, like humans. You can try and send a letter to your mayor if he/she can establish a law for the protection of animals. For example, laws that require people stop killing, hurting, and mistreating animals are good suggestions. Another thing you can do for protection is to put up signs to tell people not to kill animals. Or, if you see stray animals on the street, call an animal center to give them a temporary home.

Animals need us to show how important they are and why we need them. One way is to put up posters explaining why they are important and why we need them. You can also spread the word of the importance of animals through a website dedicated to the protection of animals.

Animals need our help to make their lives better. We can help them by giving or making them a good environment, giving them protection, and showing how important and why we need them. You can help improve their lives now, so go out and save some animals in your community.
