Hi, do you ever think about feelings that animals might have? Well here is what I thought about when I was asked this question. Sit back, read, and enjoy!

Here are some feelings your everyday kind of pets might have and what they might say if we could ask them how they feel.

I think cats might feel like royalty. "Oh isn't it great that I get everything I want." And "I get a bed and that dog's outside, ha! ha! ha!" They might say.

Next is man's best friend, a dog's feelings. Sometimes the owners go a little bit over board, in my opinion, and put clothes on their dogs. The dogs might think, "I look ridiculous." Or "Aren't I beautiful in my new outfit?" Dogs might also think, "Why do I have to be washed all the time? Don't they know I am dirty because I love to dig deep, deep down for treasures, so I am just going to get dirty all over again. Arrgh!" Another feeling dogs enjoy is when it is play time for them. "I am so excited because I get to play with these awesome kids." This must be what they are thinking as they are jumping up and down and licking all over us.

A bird can sometimes be a great pet and friend. They must think, "This is the life. I can see everything from up here." Also, some may think, "Hey you move out of my way. I'm trying to fly." (Even though, it is really just a light or a window that they are about to run into).

Now as for a couple of other animals you might see around here in Texas but probably wouldn't keep as pets. The first ones are armadillos. I think that they might think, "Hey don't kick me I'm not a ball." Then there are the raccoons. Since they are awake at night I think they might think they are sneaky detective or criminals. They may think, "Hey I know what everybody is up to". Or "I can get away with anything!" Also, there are snakes. When people take hikes is when they see snakes the most. The snakes might think "Hiss! Move out of my way or I will bite you. I hope you don't think I'm a stick and pick me up I might bite again and you don't want that!"

I hope you had a wonderful time listening to what I think animals feelings are and how different animals react. I think that animals are exciting and I had a wonderful time expressing my feelings about this subject.
