If Animals Could Talk What Would They Say?

Our dog tale begins with a little boy named Richard. One day Richard was playing outside when he heard a sound. It sounded like a boom. Richard heard a voice. He turned around and he saw a dog. Richard said, "You can talk!" "Yes, I can." the dog said. "My name is Sparky and I have come to help you through your bad situations and hard choices. I will be your best friend to the end." Here begins the adventures of Richard and Sparky.

Richard goes to school. There is a school bully named Derrick. He says to Richard, "Give me your lunch money." Richard did not know that Sparky followed him to school. Out of nowhere Sparky comes running. Sparky barks saying "Get away from my human!" and Derrick runs away. Richard thanked Sparky. Sparky says, "I told you I am your best friend to the end."

Richard was going home when a dog jumped out of nowhere and started to bark at him. Sparky growls and tells the dog "don't even think about it. If you touch him, I will hurt you!" The dog ran away and again Richard said "thank you" Sparky tells Richard, "You are welcome. I will not let anyone or anything hurt you. My job is to be your best friend and protect you."

In another adventure they meet up with the neighbor named Ms. Bitsy. One of her dogs is named Spike. Sparky and Spike are friends. Sparky says to Spike, "What's up?" Spike says, "Hey got some problems at Ms. Bitsy's house. She has a kind heart but she has a lot of pets and we think this is too much for her. "I only have one owner" Sparky says "and I take very good care of my owner." Sparky tells Spike "Ms. Bitsy needs to go to the animal shelter and find information about proper animal care and taking good care of pets. Some of you may find good homes if taken to the shelter. I will tell Richard to talk to Ms. Bitsy."

Richard and Sparky sit down to have a talk. They talk about Ms. Bitsy and Richard agrees to help. Sparky tells Richard that humans can improve the lives of their pets by not abandoning them on the streets, take them to the vet, give them food, exercise, let them play outside, make sure they go to the restroom, and make sure they get attention. Animals can help humans by being there when they have problems, when they need help, caring for them, and just to love them.

Our tale ends with Richard and Sparky being best friends for eternity. You too can have a best friend. If animals could talk they would say come to the animal shelter and adopt me. I will be there for you and I will help you through the dark times. I just need a home, food, and someone to love me. The animal shelter can provide you with a nice pet that will be your best friend for life.
