Who was that man in the mask?

Zach Holm

Zach picked up a box on Friday to deliver to the senior center. He and his family have made cloth masks for neighbors and friends, and the senior center was his next stop.

The project was a labor of love for the Holm family. “We did it for our seniors. We saw the call for handmade masks on social media and thought it was a good idea,” said Zach. “But we thought we could do even better and came up with the idea of making masks for the senior center.”

“Zach was that man in the mask,” said Cindy Holm, Zach’s mother and the program coordinator at the senior center. “He and his family took my one significant step further.”

“[The senior center was] starved of masks; they had finished 176 masks,” said Zach. “But we thought we could do even better and came up with the idea of making masks for the senior center.”
