COVID-19 forces cancellation of summer events

During Monday's Committee of the Whole, we announced the cancellation of our annual Fourth of July celebration. I don't think it came as a huge shock, due to the enormous challenges posed by COVID-19. We are still evaluating the possibility of opening at least a portion of the Renton River Days, which this year included the Multicultural Festival and Kennydale Beach Park. If allowed under the governor's "Stay Home, Stay Healthy" order. However, the trailer lot is only for vehicles with boat trailers. Those vehicles not attached to a trailer will be ticketed. Liberty Park has security fencing around the skate park and plywood over the basketball hoops. Wood chips have also been blown into the skate park.

We're also interested in hearing your feedback and ideas on how we can make these events an example of how to adapt, change and succeed in a new normal.

Department updates

At Monday's Committee of the Whole, the administrators gave updates on how their departments have adjusted to dealing with COVID-19. I've listed some highlights.

Community and Economic Development

- Most completed area of site but continue to process permits, review blueprints and ensure compliance with the governor's "Stay Home, Stay Healthy" order.
- Responding to violations of social distancing guidelines as schedules allow. Most complaints so far have been families who lived in same household.
- Positive reaction to social media campaign showing "Renton businesses open." Positive impressions of the city's safety and cleanliness.
- Transitioned several staff to work directly with businesses to help with financial impact and have placed a freeze on hiring, training and capital expenses.
- Have posted the "Renton Minute," highlighting businesses that are open. Used funds from Port of Seattle to provide outreach to all businesses.
- Recently completed outreach to all local restaurants and plan another.
- Reopened some City facilities for community use.

With information regarding COVID-19 continually being updated, I've developed a comprehensive outreach plan with the King County Health Department and the City's Community Services, to ensure our residents of Renton. In each edition our team will bring you the latest decisions in Renton, as well as information from state and federal officials and agencies.

Renton is joining with other cities prior to approaching King County about receiving funding from the CARES Act. Appears that the county will require cities to have a plan in place for the use of federal funds to reduce non-essential operations.

Rental Moratorium

State Moratorium

Rental moratoriums across the state are in effect for April and May in order to reduce evictions for non-paying tenants. In response, the City of Renton has enacted a rental moratorium for the month of April.

Eviction Moratorium

The City Council passed an eviction moratorium which prohibits landlords from filing eviction actions against tenants due to non-payment of rent. The moratorium is in effect for the month of April and applies only to residential properties.

Eviction Petitions

Eviction petitions for non-payment of rent filed during the month of April will not be processed by the Renton Municipal Court. The moratorium applies to tenants who are unable to pay rent due to the impacts of COVID-19.

Short-term Rental

The City Council also passed an ordinance that extends the ban on short-term rentals to June 30, 2020. The ban applies to all short-term rentals within the city limits.

Eviction Ordinance

The moratorium applies to all residential rental properties, including single family homes, apartments, and multi-family complexes.

Eviction Restrictions

The moratorium restricts the ability of landlords to file eviction actions against tenants due to non-payment of rent during the month of April. The moratorium applies only to residential properties.

Inspections
- CED has interpreted the Stay Home, Stay Healthy order to deem new residential and commercial construction as non-essential activities, excluding those necessary to safeguard public health and public safety (such as public affordable housing projects) and public components of private projects (such as utility infrastructure). Additionally, CED has interpreted the Stay Home, Stay Healthy order to allow construction related to the order’s list of essential activities.
- Under these interpretations, CED will continue to issue permits.
- Building permits for residential projects made up for turnover to the city are closed.
- Building permits for buildings that are a necessary component of the community’s supply chain for goods, services, and materials.
- Engineering permits for facilities intended to be made part of the city’s public facilities, such as parks, schools, and fire stations, and stormwater and utilities intended to be transferred to the city at completion.
- Building permits for facilities intended to be transferred to the city at completion.
- Affairs will not be performing physical on-site inspections for new unoccupied residential projects or other projects falling outside the above list, some inspections will be conducted virtually. If you are interested in more information on these inspections, please contact the Building Division at 425-330-4373.
- There are also several recommended things you can do to support yourself.
- Take care of your body. Take deep breaths and stretch, eat meals, exercise regularly, get plenty of sleep, and avoid excessive drinking and smoking.
- Make time to unwind. Try to do some other activities you enjoy.
